Funded by the City Council of New York, the Small Business Consulting Practice is designed to train its cohorts to become consultants for small businesses.

The objective is to give students knowledge on:

• How to start a business
• The tools available to help grow a business

Then, we line them up with:

• Small business owners in the community
• Local Entrepreneurs
The goal is to have students:

- Take a client
- Apply what they learned
- Gain real world experience
- Reflect on that experience
Students are given training and workshops in:

- Basic web development
- Social media marketing
- Financial projections
- Loan Packaging
- Legal Aspects of Entrepreneurship
For small businesses to grow and develop, it is essential:
• To have a digital presence
• A well-designed website

We designed an intensive course to teach students how to:
• Develop and design a functional website
• Publish and maintain a business website

Web Development – How websites work

Students learned

• Why websites are an integral part of a business’ marketing strategy

• How to create an interactive and responsive website using modern programing language.

• The different resources needed for website publication
A website’s functionality relies on:

- Frontend programming
- Backend programming

Both sides need to communicate and operate effectively with the other as a single unit.
The Front End

It includes everything the user experiences directly:

- Text
- Colors
- Buttons and images
- Navigation menus.
For front-end development students learned how to utilized:

- HTML5
- CSS3
- JavaScript
- Front-end Libraries such as Bootstrap 3
The Back End

The backend is what you don’t see. It’s responsible for:

- Storing data
- Organizing data
- Ensuring the front end is functional
Students learned how to utilize and manipulate Open-Source Libraries and Web Builders to speed up the process.

Examples:
- Bootstrap 3
- Wix
- WordPress
- SquareSpace
Student Learned important aspects that increase traffic and secure information on a business websites such as:

- Search Engine Optimization (SEO)
- Monetizing a site
- SSL Certificate

For small businesses to grow, it is essential to get funding from banks. To do so, they must have a viable business plan along with financial models to prove the business is profitable.

Our financial projections training is an intensive 4-week course that gives students the knowledge needed to develop a business model and project the profits for that model over and extended period of time.
Students learned:

• How to develop a sound business plan
• Research industry standards
• Estimate start up costs
• Calculate cost of operations
Students Created:

- Their own case studies for their business venture
- A profit model for their business
- An estimate of the cost of operations using industry standards
- Detailed financial projections for the business
Students
• Pitched their projections to SBDC advisors
• Received feedback regarding the strengths and weaknesses of their projections
• Made revisions to their projections based on the feedback
Training Programs

Business Plans and Financial projections

Students

• Made their final presentations to a panel of imaginary investors.

• Received feedback from instructors and from peers.
Students learned:

• How to legally establish a business

• The differences between the types of Business Entities such as:
  LLC
  Sole Proprietor
  Partnership
Students were placed with a variety of businesses:

- In a variety of industries
- With different needs
